LOCAL MUSICIANS PLAYED AT FULTON

Soverhill Sisters, Assisted by Miss Woodbury and Others, Gave a Church Benefit Concert.

In the Congregational church at Fulton, a concert was given on Friday evening by the Misses Cora, Lalla, Edith and Wilna Soverhill and Miss Mabel Woodbury of this city, assisted by Charles Raymond of Fulton and Miss Mabel Hopkins of Indian Ford. The concert was given for the benefit of the church.

The entertainment was a success, the church being crowded, and though the building seats two hundred people it was necessary to place chairs in the aisles to accommodate the audience.

Music By Young Girls

It was an appreciative audience and though the program had been lengthy to avoid encores, responses were frequently. The Soverhill Sisters' orchestra, with Miss Woodbury at the piano, gave several selections and the program also included a violin solo by Miss Wilna; a banjo solo by Miss Lalla and a mandolin solo by Miss Edith. Miss Woodbury and Wilna Soverhill played a violin duet, Miss Cora Soverhill being the pianist.

Readings and Songs

Miss Hopkins, an elocutionist, gave three recitations on the program and responded to an encore after each selection. The vocal solo by Mr. Raymond was a musical treat and he was forced to give another selection.

Drove Overland

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Soverhill, accompanied their daughters and Miss Woodbury to Fulton. The trip was made by carriage and the party returned home after the concert last evening.

FRANCE LOOKS TO US AS MEDIATOR

Believes the United States is the Only Government That Can Act in Present Crisis. (Special By Scripps-McRae)

Paris, Dec. 13.—A foreign office official made the following statement today to the Associated Press:

"No exchange of views has taken place between the European powers concerning the Venezuelan situation, and no such exchange is necessary, as it is definitely held that the affair is one in which the United States should be left free to take the initiative in mediation."

This statement was called out by the suggestion of the Temps that it was time for Europe to speak in the interest of universal peace. The official added:

"It is fully recognized here and at the other capitals that the United States is the only power in position to act as an intermediary. Hence there is no intention on the part of the European powers to take concerted or individual action."

The release of the French steamer Ossun, seized by the Germans at La Guaira, has not yet been reported at the foreign office, but the officials accept the unofficial reports of her release, thus relieving the incident of its gravity.

Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Hart very happily entertained at their home, Friday evening, the members of the whist club to which they belong.

Jolly Whist Club

Certainly the fact that they are without a club name never detracts from their enjoyment and last evening's meeting was one of the jolliest. According to custom, the members assembled at six o'clock and enjoyed dinner together before the card play.

Dinner, Whist and Prizes

The dinner with which Mrs. Hart served her guests last evening included three courses very prettily served. After the supper cards were brought and whist was the game of the evening.

There are twenty members of the club and they were all present at last evening's gathering. Mrs. E. C. Bailey received a handsome plate and Walter Johnson was awarded a cut glass knife rest for being the most proficient players. The amusing booby prizes were captured by Mrs. R. H. Barlow and E. C. Bailey.

All German and English residents of the town have been released by order of President Castro. They have taken refuge on board the foreign warships.

NOTABLE LECTURE BY PROF. COULTER

HEAD OF THE BOTANICAL DEPARTMENT GIVES ADDRESS,

"TWENTIETH CENTURY MAN"

Many Heard the Noted Scientist from the University of Chicago—
An Unusual Occasion.

Janesville people were given a rare treat at the Presbyterian church on Friday evening. Seldom has a man of so great intellectual caliber as Dr. John M. Coulter of the University of Chicago lectured before a Bower City audience. And seldom has it been possible to hear an address so heavily freighted with deep and salient truths as that of the distinguished head of the botanical department of the great Midway institution of learning.

Although the lecture upon The Twentieth Century Man was so scholarly, so full of thoughts worth hearing and so all embracing in its grasp of the theme, it was compressed within remarkably few words. The speaker reached his concluding sentence before nine o'clock. Each word told.

Each sentence completed an idea. Each paragraph covered subject matter that the average lecturer would need a volume to express adequately. Topics which no attempt was made to deal with were suggested between the lines. The address was disappointing only in the mass of ideas which the listener could not retain.

Yet every thought was to the point. Briefly expressed the Twentieth Century man must have enthusiasm, adaptability, and power to grow. That is all. But worlds of study and reflection were opened up which nothing short of the text of his lecture could suggest.

A Notable Lecture

In another way Dr. Coulter's coming to Janesville was significant. It was a free lecture. It was free through the generosity of one man. Nominaly it was given under the auspices of the Men's League of the Presbyterian church. In reality it was given by one member of the league who advanced the entire cost of bringing the eminent scientist to the city in order to give the people at large an opportunity to hear the thoughts of a man of great ideas.

Many attended the lecture. The auditorium was filled and the doors of the lecture room were thrown wide to accommodate the throng who took advantage of the great privilege open to them.

Church Men's League

In behalf of the Men's League the Rev. J. T. Henderson introduced the speaker. He called attention to the fact that it was not in actuality the league which had secured Dr. Coulter although it was impossible to reveal the name of the generous donor. He expressed the hope that the precedent thus set might prove contagious in the city, and others might in the same way place before Janesville people similar opportunities.

Rev. Henderson when he presented the speaker referred to Dr. Coulter's ability to distinguish any flower that grew by the common or scientific name. The latter, in assuming the floor answered that he had long ago forgotten many of these names and plants as other matters of greater importance had crept in to take the place of this less useful knowledge.

With this admission Dr. Coulter entered upon his subject. The nineteenth century, he said, was a materialistic age. The quality is characteristic of the present age, but there is a much more extensive intellectualism which tempers it.

Enthusiasm was the first quality which the lecturer called for in the Twentieth Century man. It is essential for success. But it should be directed against fundamentals, not trifles. Genuine enthusiasm can distinguish between good and evil, and is content to work and wait. He aptly illustrated the difference between the two qualities of enthusiasm by referring to the thundering crater of a western geyser which sends forth its belching stream of boiling water, killing all surrounding vegetation. The quiet rivulet by its side creates a new mass of verdure wherever it flows.

The Narrow Philosopher

The man whose vision is distorted by a cynical philosophy is allowing his powers to go to waste, however enthusiastic he may seem to be. Divine enthusiasm, the enthusiasm strengthened by sincere faith in an all-powerful God makes for success.

Dr. Coulter spoke strongly against the closet theorist who attempts to mould the world. Stand upon the mountain tops, he said; make your viewpoint so far above the world that the rivulet cannot be mistaken for the ocean and the puny daily event for the powerful undercurrent which is alternating the age.

Adaptation is the second quality of importance. Those minor and transient changes, occasioned by daily life should not be mistaken for adaptability. That is merely tact. It is the power of conforming to slowly changing social conditions that is necessary. As the youth approaches manhood his vision of thought rapidly enlarges and he must adapt himself to it. The world is undergoing a similar change, but slower and far less perceptible.

Consistency is a jewel, provided it turns its polished facets towards every new ray of light.

The whole lump of human knowledge is being leavened by a gradual development of the thinking habit. The application of scientific thought to the formation of opinions is a mark of great advance. The premises upon which any belief rests must be forthcoming. The suppression of facts to skepticism or superstition. Mass thinking is giving way to individual investigation.

Inherited Ideas

The hardest task before the human mind is that of revising hereditary beliefs. Universal consent on a subject is often universal ignorance. But the necessity of human opinion makes it impossible to avoid a certain number of fallacies.

Christianity is a subject which appeals to scientific investigation. Its influence has been so great as to command the attention of every thinking mind. A system which claims to both energize and save demands careful thought. Christianity has suffered more from its friends than from its enemies, because they have persisted in following every surface wave instead of discovering the deep currents. It is a curious way of arriving at religious facts to follow out the diverging lines of denominationalism, and yet this is what many attempt to do.

Most important of all elements in the forceful life is the spirit of growth. Growth results from accumulation in excess of immediate needs. But most persons are satisfied to secure the necessities of the day. There is no forceful life which does not predate growth. A man must not continue to live by and set forth the theories he learned in college, making no allowance for the advance of the world. A clergyman must not always set forth the tenets he was taught in the theological seminary.

YOUSEFF BEGINS WORK FOR MATCH

"Terrible Turk" Will Go Through a Strenuous Course of Training To Meet Beel.

Lovers of the wrestling game are to see one of the best matches that has been in Janesville for many a long day on Tuesday, December 23 at the rink. Youseff, the "Terrible Turk," and Fred Beel, of Marshfield, the state champion, having signed articles to come together on that date.

Catch-As-Catch-Can

The match has been arranged for and the Police Gazette rules catch-as-catch-can will be adhered to. It is probable that William Appleby of Beel will act as referee.

A Good Wrestler

Youseff is the nephew of the famous Youseff who came to this country six years ago and threw every wrestler of note who would meet him. The elder Youseff went down in the ill-fated La Burgoyne off the Canary Islands giving his life that the women and children might be saved.

Starts Training

Youseff will start training on Monday by taking a walk to Beloit each morning and exercising in Kline's gymnasium and riding back on the interurban. He is in excellent condition and should make it interesting for Beel.

Just at present Youseff is disconsolate over the loss of the emerald setting from a valuable ring. The stone was purchased by his father, Youseff the older, in Constantinople. The latter gave it to his son who had it mounted and he has worn it several years. He prized it highly and says that he will give a large reward to the finder if it is returned to him at the opera house saloon.

The program was an extensive one and was carried out in a pleasing manner. The visitors and teachers were gratified with the rendition of the program which reflected great credit on the performers.

"The exhibition of the pupils of the high school added new testimony to the value and efficiency of our school system. Large audiences assembled, and particularly the full attendance last evening, notwithstanding the storm prevailing, was a gratifying evidence of the interest these occasions always inspire. There was a marked improvement in the accomplishments of the pupils, which must have been as satisfactory to their teachers as to their parents. No expenditure of public money is doing

EMINENT BOTANIST IS GUEST OF CLUB

Presbyterian Men's League Gives Supper in Honor of Dr. Coulter of Chicago.

Members of the Presbyterian Men's club and their guests, to the total number of forty-five assembled in the church dining rooms Friday evening to do honor to Dr. J. M. Coulter. The ladies of the church served a very appetizing supper. After the men had done justice to the good things before them, a few words in honor of the occasion were spoken by several of the men present. Dr. Coulter responded briefly.

The supper provided was unusually tempting and many words were spoken in praise of the cookery if not of the creed of the church by the guests of the organization. A number of the representative business men of the city of other denominations, had been invited to meet the noted botanist.

A Tempting Supper

It was late when the men seated themselves at the tables which were arranged in the form of a Greek cross. Dr. Coulter did not arrive from Chicago until nearly seven o'clock, so that an earlier beginning was impossible. Considerable time was required for an adequate discussion of the bountiful viands, so that when the men were ready to push back their chairs it was too late for any extended program.

Instead, Rev. J. T. Henderson introduced the guest of honor, after commenting briefly on the unusual nature of the occasion. He called upon Dr. Coulter to speak a few words in foretaste of the evening's lecture.

Guest Of Honor Speaks

Dr. Coulter responded briefly, refusing to allow his remarks to be taken as in any way connected with his words which were to follow. He spoke warmly of the influence which an organization such as the men's league can exert in a church and upon a community. The pastors of the church have been studying for years, but in some ways their influence has not been what they have desired. The men's club reaches a large class in every city who would not otherwise be brought into connection with the phase of life which it represents. Dr. Coulter said that he noted with pleasure and hopefulness the movement, believing that it presaged a widened influence of the church.

In response to a request from the pastor for a few words Mayor V. P. Richardson said that he believed that Dr. Coulter's coming called attention to a new element which is entering into twentieth century life—the social. In times past a stranger was considered an enemy. Now a growing feeling of cordiality is springing into existence. He believed that the visit of Dr. Coulter was significant of great advancement and was glad among others to be able to welcome him.

Welcomed ocal Spirit

George S. Parker in answer to a request from the pastor that he add a few words to what had already been said, heartily seconded Mr. Richardson's remarks. He also, anticipated a wide-reaching effect from the growing social spirit. He believed that by a large number of persons otherwise inaccessible could be reached. He hoped that Dr. Coulter's remarks would point the way to a fuller development of this kind of life.

By this time the hour of the lecture was near at hand so the men repaired in a body to the auditorium of the church, there to hear Dr. Coulter's lecture.

KNIGHT SETTLES FOR BAD CHECKS

He Raises the Money to Pay All Accounts, and Is Released from Custody.

D. I. Knight, who was arrested Wednesday night for passing worthless checks on a number of people in this city was not brought before the court yesterday. He secured sufficient money to settle for all the checks and accounts that were out against him and as none of the parties holding them cared to prosecute him he was allowed to go. The experience ought to be a lesson to him about the dangers of giving checks that were no good. Chief Hogan was given the money to settle the accounts and saw that all was squared up before he turned Knight out.

Piano Recital

Views were exhibited showing the plan of the Greek theater always in a circle, the benches made of hard slabs of rough stone marked every thirteen inches to show how much room each person could have. There were marble chairs for the princes and the people stayed all day. Some of the Greek theaters held 50,000 people. As the theater going was compulsory it was necessary for the theater to seat the entire citizenship.

Actors Wear Masks

The great attraction of seeing a play in Athens is the realism of being out of doors. The old Greek actors, some dressed as women, wore exaggerated costumes, high head dress and shoes whose soles were so thick that they formed genuine pedestals.

To portray the different characters, thin light masks of clay were worn and the expression on these, whether tragic or comic, was terribly exaggerated.

Shown On Vases

Scenes from these old tragedies and comedies, showing the ancient customs were reproduced on the old vases and nowhere can the people of today get so near the old Greek life as in the museums where these vases are kept.

The history of Ancient Greece is traced upon them and the painters and engravers of these old vases deserve the thanks of all history students.

Three Great Writers

Prof. Wright closed his lecture by quoting Mrs. Browning's lines comparing the characteristics of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides, the three great writers of Greek drama.

Illustrated It With Views

The Sabath School of the Baptist church and the Mission school will hold a festival and have supper at Lappin's hall on Monday evening. The proceeds of the festival will be devoted to the building of a new chapel for the Mission school, and as the object is evidently worthy of patronage, we trust that it will receive a rousing patronage.

Fire Causes $200,000 Loss.

Syracuse, Dec. 13.—The whole grocery house of J. L. Connell, on Franklin avenue, was completely destroyed by fire; loss, $200,000. Two men were badly hurt by falling brick.

LECTURE GIVEN ON GREEK DRAMA

PROF. WRIGHT ENTERTAINS THE JANESEVILLE ART LEAGUE.

Speaker Shows How the Drama Originated in the Worship of Dionysus.

For the second time during the present study year, members and friends of the Janesville Art League had the pleasure of listening to a lecture by Prof. Theodore L. Wright, of Beloit college, on Friday afternoon. The lecture was given in the science recitation room at the Janesville High school, there being a large number in attendance.

Prof. Wright had charge of planning the year's work for the year on Greek art and for the subject of his second lecture he chose the Greek drama. The lecture was illustrated with the stereopticon, Prof. Wright being assisted by his nephew, Wallace Dixon, and some fine views were shown. For over an hour the speaker held the undivided attention of his audience his conversational style with its unexpected flashes of dry humor proving more entertaining with each lecture.

Drama Began in Worship

As an introduction Prof. Wright said that he should devote the most of his time to the study of the origin of the drama and the form of Greek worship which led to the comedies and tragedies. The theater of the ancients was a temple at the entrance of which stood an altar to Dionysus, the god of the grape vine. He is just the God in whose worship people might be expected to produce art.

The early worship of the Greeks included the elements of play made symmetrical by people gathered together on festive occasions.

A Tragic Story

The story of Dionysus is one of passion, pathos and all the elements which make up a tragedy. He stands for the joy and sorrow of ... in the fields in the happy springtime and the brushwood time of autumn. His workshop implied passion, personation, for his followers tried to imitate him, and plot. The first evidence of plot is in the story of his birth. His mother, Semele, was killed by a thunder bolt and he was concealed in the thigh of his father, Zeus, from which he sprang.

The scenes of the infancy and young manhood of the God, as shown by the pieces of ancient Greek sculpture, were presented the speaker showing how the early drama grew out of the worship of this god. The first choruses patterned their dances after the sculptured representations of the nymphs and fauns who cared for him. They tried to imitate the frenzied orgies to the God of frenzy and the elder satyrs and fauns, who were degenerates, furnished the inspiration for the comedians.

Flutes For Music

All through the Greek tragedy, instead of an orchestra, there was the piping of flutes which were discovered by an attendant of Dionysus. A reproduction of the ancient worship may still be found in Athens on St. George's day when long circles of women with arms entwined dance all day long, a monotonously graceful dance, three steps forward and two back.

The First: Theater

The true theater of Dionysus was unearthed near Athens beneath a cornfield fifty years ago. The theater was built in a circle around an altar at which the people worshipped. Originally they needed no seats for all joined in the drama. Gradually those were selected who could dance the best and sing the best story as they danced. Then some one was introduced to explain the songs, this being the first appearance of the actor. Then seats were required on the side of the hill.

Circular Theaters

Views were exhibited showing the plan of the Greek theater always in a circle, the benches made of hard slabs of rough stone marked every thirteen inches to show how much room each person could have. There were marble chairs for the princes and the people stayed all day. Some of the Greek theaters held 50,000 people. As the theater going was compulsory it was necessary for the theater to seat the entire citizenship.

Music and Mirth.

SKETCHES FROM WORLD'S MARKET

Wall Street as It Is, and What It Means to the Speculators.

New York. He whom Wall Street is pleased to call the "outsider" reads now and then that "the stock market has been greatly improved by drastic liquidation," or that "the general shaking out of weak public accounts has eased the monetary situation," and the longer he ponders the information the more puzzled he is. It seems to him to be self evident proposition that everything that is sold also is bought. Stocks are not eliminated; they are not dumped into the sea off Battery Park wall and thus put forever beyond the way of making trouble for speculative men. How then, the outsider is likely to ask, does liquidation, however enormous or drastic, change matters much for the better? A complete answer to this question would be complicated and more or less technical. For the outsiders' purpose it may be answered by stating two general propositions. The first would be that it costs less to buy or to carry a stock at par than it would to buy or carry that same stock at say 120. The people who do most of the liquidating in times of speculative trouble are those who bought their stock at 120. A decline averaging 15 points in the stock market list involves shrinkage of hundreds of millions of dollars in paper values, but those paper values while they existed were sufficiently real to form the basis of borrowing credit at the banks. Ordinarily a Wall Street bank will lend 100 on a good stock that is selling around 120 and only about 80 on that same stock when it is selling around par. Thus it is seen how such liquidation as would cause a stock to decline from 120 to par would also cause a reduction in bank loans and thereby ease the financial situation. The second proposition is somewhat more intricate. When there has been general liquidation in the stock market it is said that securities have passed from weak hands into strong hands, and that about tells the story. Even in a panic somebody buys all the stocks that other people sell, but the people who buy stocks when the public is selling are the shrewdest professional people in Wall street. They are what are known in the vernacular as the "big people." They belong to the Standard Oil party, the organ party, life insurance companies, numerous powerful banking and speculative parties and also parties who stand sponsor for certain stocks in the market. Thus when for one reason or another the public is forced to liquidate its speculative holdings of Atchinson the Berwind party buys Achison back on "scale down" orders, and the Achison it buys in this manner is the same Achison that it sold to the public higher up. Achison is used merely to illustrate the point. The same would be true of any other established and active stock. Then there are the parties and men who are in the midst of distributing new securities or pooled stocks when the market begins to break, and these then have in sheer defense to buy the particular stock or stocks for which they are responsible. Thus while the United States Steel share were being distributed to the public, seeing how easily they defrauded the market went wrong else the public, seeing how weakly they declined, would become distrustful and refuse at another time to take or "absorb" the stock. Each of these Wall street parties has strong financial backing. The Standard Oil party controls the largest bank in the country together with a number of smaller banks and trust companies. The Morgan company owns the second largest bank in this country and a number of smaller banks and trust companies besides. When either of these parties buys stocks it knows where it can go to finance its purchases. The same in lesser degree is true of all the parties, i.e., the big people, and if it were not so the bottom would speedily drop out of the stock market. Somebody has to stand up with the bag to buy everything the public sells. It is equally true, however, that the people with the bag always buy stocks when they are cheap, and sell them again to the public when they are high. Trouble comes because the public in its greed buys more than it is able to care for, and again the bag opens, again there is somebody there to take stocks as the public throws them over, and again in good time the public buys those same stocks out of the bag at higher prices. The process is as old as Wall street—older. It is as old as the oldest stock exchange in the world. If nobody bought more stocks than he was able to take up and pay for in a pinch there would never be any panics in Wall street.

Theodore Price, a big, round-faced, smiling man, is again in the midst of a bull campaign in cotton and breathing hard. It seems to be the habit of the man to bull cotton. Only about three years ago he wrecked the firm of Price, McCormick & Co., trying to buy cotton to 10 cents. His firm failed for $14,000,000 and for a little while the thrilling young plunger, penniless dropped out of Wall street's gaze. He took desk room in the office of a friend over in the Lord's Court building and tried to rebuild his fortune in several different ways finally gravitating back to cotton. The next the public had heard of him he had made an exhaustive canvass of the cotton crop and had concluded therefore that cotton ought to be bullied. No Price canvass ever justified any other conclusion. His figures were so convincing that he got some men with money to back him and they made a handsome turn on the long side of the market. With his share of the profits as fresh capital Price began to buy cotton on his own account and he has been building it ever since, on a progressively larger scale. At a recent stage of his present campaign he interested a lot of idle stock market speculators in cotton, and half the traders of Wall street wore long of the stuff. At the very top of the market the government's crop report came along estimating the crop much larger than Price had estimated it, and the market broke 24 points, quite wiping out the stock market continent. Price and his brokers sold cotton on the break, but Price is still a bull on cotton and bulling it.

The Judge stern and authoritative, leaned out over his desk and looked down at the young beligerent, a boy of about 9, who had been brought in by a big policeman for judgment.

Sizing the boy up and down over his glasses, the Judge cleared his throat.

"Young man," he said, "do you understand the ethics of swearing?" "Yes, sir," replied the urchin promptly, "I caddled for you last summer!"

DAVID BROWN'S ACT CHEERED BY CROWD

He Rescues a Dog from the River, Risking His Own Life on Treacherous Ice.

Stories of the devotion of dogs to mankind which after leads the noble animals to sacrifice their lives for their human friends are quite frequent. It is not often, however, that the case is reversed by a man's taking any risk for the sake of a dog.

David Brown furnished one of these rare instances Friday morning, when at the risk of his own life, he rescued a frightened and pitifully crying dog from an icy finish in the cold waters of Rock river. It was a manifestation of humane feeling such as is seldom seen and stands out in marked contrast against the brutality which is all too often shown dumb animals.

Dog Falls to River

The small dog was walking on the ice formed on the river back of the rink. He trotted out on to the thin ice and finally got too near to the edge and slipped into the water. He was unable to get out and as he made the desperate attempt unsuccessfully time after time, he began to cry pitifully. Repeatedly he placed his front feet on the edge of the thin ice only to slip back into the water when he tried to scramble out onto the ice.

His cries and despairing howls attracted the notice of all the people in the stores along the river and on Court street bridge and a large audience of spectators assembled. No one seemed particularly interested in the dog's fate, however, until David Brown's attention was attracted.

Brown to the Rescue

Mr. Brown wasted no time in looking. He secured a ladder and a rope and placed the ladder down onto the ice from the rear of his feed store. He then descended the ladder and crept carefully out onto the ice. He called the dog to him and grasped him by the neck, pulling him out of the water.

Ice Gave Way

At least two hundred spectators witnessed the rescue, seeing nothing at all ludicrous in the incident. It was, on the contrary, an impressive scene and one that appealed to the tender sentiments of those who saw it. When the rescue had been accomplished the crowd broke into cheers, giving three rousing ones for David Brown and three for the dog.

THE STILL SMALL VOICE

In a little cottage, many years ago, a mother sat by the fireside one evening rocking to sleep the baby boy that had come into her home the year before. The place was quiet, for the father had gone away on an annual pilgrimage to the house of the priest in a distant city.

The mother had been urged to accompany him, and take the baby along, but she said, "No, my place is at home with the child when he is old enough, I am going to take him to the city and leave him with the priests to educate."

And so while she sat alone in the quiet of the evening, and rocked and sang to the baby, she found herself planning for the future.

He was a child of promise, and of destiny. The first that had come into her home, and as she held him closely into her bosom, she remembered the promise given, to dedicate his life to sacred service.

She loved the child with all the intensity of a mother's devotion, and as she bent over him with a good-night kiss, and followed thought out into the future, imagination painted for a picture of the baby grown to manhood, and she turned away to commune with herself about the little lad's future.

Ten years later the home was lonely because the boy had gone out of it and entered upon a course of training under the direction of the old priest.

The mother visited him once a year and restocked his wardrobe, looking after his wants with motherly solicitude.

She was glad to note that the new surroundings, so different from the little home in the country, and so full of temptation and bad influences, had not poisoned the mind of the boy, and that his heart was still faithful to his mother's God.

When she bade him "good-bye" and held him close to her in loving embrace, she said, "My boy, I expect to hear good reports of you; be faithful in your work, and don't forget that the still small voice that says 'do right' never made any mistakes."

A few nights later when the boy had gone to bed, and was thinking about his mother, and the old home he heard some one call his name distinctly. "Samuel" and spring up he went to a room near by, occupied by the old priest and said, "Here am I, for thou call me." But the priest said, "No, I didn't call you, go and lie down again."

In a few moments he heard the voice the second time, and was very much surprised when the priest told him that he had not spoken.

When the voice called again he went to the room of the old man and said, "Here am I, for thou didst call me," and the priest discovered that the Lord was talking with the boy, and so he said:

"Go lie down; and it shall be if He call thee, that thou shalt say, 'speak Lord for thy servant heareth.'"

So the boy went back to bed, and soon the voice called again and Samuel was told of his mission and of his future work.

This little story dates back to a period in history when the chosen people were under the leadership of a few men known as priests and prophets, who received instructions from God Himself.

It was the transition period preceding the era of personal responsibility ushered in by the new dispensation. The boy Samuel was a privileged character because he was in the line of succession, and because he had a mother who appreciated the situation, and whose love and ambition prompted her to prepare the boy for intelligent service.

It was a period of dreams and visions, of ignorance and superstition. Every royal court had its coterie of wise men, sooth-sayers, and magicians. People were influenced by the marvelous and revered the supernatural.

To meet these conditions, the Ark of Covenant was employed, and for centuries it represented the earthly dwelling place of the King of kings. It was a tangible object lesson, more powerful than any idol, and more mysterious.

When the boy Samuel listened to the voice in the night, in the house of the old priest Eli, he knew that under the same roof the Ark of Covenant rested, and that the sons of the priest, whose duty it was, to look after it, were negligent in duty, and profane in service.

He knew that the old man was feeble, and that soon some one must succeed him in the sacred office which he had so long occupied, and that his own sons, were so profligate that the people had no confidence in them.

The voice was new and strange to him, but the old priest was familiar with it, and while his own boys had disappointed him, and his old age was full of sorrow on that account, he recognized in the country lad the elements of manhood and of leadership.

The twentieth century boy, in normal condition, is not given to dreams and visions. He is not superstitious, and is not very largely influenced by the supernatural. If an unknown voice in the night should suggest a certain policy for him to pursue, it would fail to impress him to any great extent.

He believes in tangible things, and if destiny crowns effort, he knows that it means work, intelligently directed and faithfully performed.

He lives at a time when nations are not annihilated for disobedience of moral law, and when the utmost freedom of thought and action is granted to the individual.

He believes in personal responsibility, and is early taught to cultivate and develop it. He may never know very much about God, but he is not long in discovering that a still small voice is ever present, prompting him to do right, and avoid the wrong.

If he listens to the voice and obeys, he is soon aware of the fact that he is at peace with himself, and in touch with the best things of life about him.

The voice that came to the boy Samuel so long ago, was the voice of God, and the same voice whispers through every conscience today in all Christendom.

It is not always a pleasant voice because humanity is not always in harmony with it, but it is more important than the voice of a friend, or the applause of the multitude.

The young man who listens to the still small voice, may not always be popular, but he will always be safe. The old priest succeeding in raising a couple of boys, who were a disgrace to the family, and the community. Other good men of more recent years have had a similar experience.

Goodness is not an inherited virtue. A Christian home does not always mean Christian succession. This is frequently the fault of education and misdirected zeal.

When more importance is attached to the still small voice of individual conscience, and the fact is more fully recognized that obedience to this voice means more than creed or profession, the world will become better, and humanity will bless humanity by the highest order of service.

SHE ONCE LIVED IN JANESEVILLE

HELEN COGSWELL IS WITH "THE

Pretty Chorus Girl Used to Sing in Amateur Entertainments in This City.

Comparatively few people in the magnificent audience which saw "The Prince of Pilson" at the Myers Grand, Wednesday evening were aware of the fact that one of the bewitching sea shell maidens once lived in this city. As a girl-headed little tot, Helen Cogswell sang and recited for Janeville audiences fifteen years ago, appearing frequently on programs given by churches and societies.

During the stay of the company in this city, Miss Cogswell and her particular friend, Miss Diamond Donner, were entertained at the home of Mrs. Susan M. Jerome and Miss Cornelia A. Brown, 162 South Jackson street. Mrs. Jerome and Miss Brown are cousins of Miss Cogswell's father. Miss Donner is also a member of the company being cast as Dolly Dixie, of New Orleans, one of the American girls. Miss Cogswell appeared on the theater program of Pearl Beach.

Wellesley College Students

Miss Donner and Miss Cogswell created quite a sensation throughout the country when the left college to join the "Prince of Pilson" company. Both young ladies were among the leaders at Wellesley college, the famous girls' school near Boston. Miss Cogswell was stroke on the Freshman crew and her friend sang in the college glee club and wrote pieces for the college paper. Both were prominent in all the college societies.

A Senior and a Graduate
Miss Cogswell this year she would have been a Senior. Instead the call to the stage became so insistent that she was deaf to everything else and last August she entered the ranks of chorus girls. She was largely influenced by the example of her friend, who joined the company in May. Miss Donner, however, had completed her college course and received her Bachelor of Arts degree last June.

No Teaching For Them

Both young ladies are eminently qualified to secure excellent positions as teachers but when asked by Miss Cogswell's Janeville relatives why they did not do so they chorused "No, thank you. We prefer comic opera." They are enthusiastic over the stage life and are very much in earnest. Miss Donner has been promised immediate promotion to the part of Edith Adams, the Vassar girl, who sings in the "Message of the Violet" trio and Miss Cogswell will soon step up higher on the operatic ladder. Miss Donner's mother travels with the girls.

Sang As A Child

The Helen Cogswell of today is a petite beauty of the blonde type with a dashing manner and bewitching personality. In fact she is just what might have been expected of the pretty little maiden who charmed the people of this city when the skirts which she wore on the street were abbreviated as the ones she now wears on the stage.

Two Talented Children

Miss Cogswell is the younger of the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cogswell and the father was proprietor of a shoe store in this city for some time. Little Miss Helen and her elder sister, Miss Carrie, often sang together and both recited. Helen was especially talented and attracted unusual attention for the clever work in entertainments when she was only a few years old. Both children were in great demand and their numbers soon came to be known as among the most attractive features of home talent entertainments.

Parents Now in Cleveland

Mr. and Mrs. Cogswell are now living at Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Carrie, the elder sister, is in Boston where she is engaged in teaching but the younger daughter prefers the glare of the footlights and is very earnest in her enthusiastic determination to seek fame on the stage. She has yet to regret her desertion of college life, with its stern realities, for the frivolous fascination of life as the comic opera writer pictures it.

NEW DEPARTURE IN CHURCH SERVICES

Antiphonal Singing at the Congregational Church—New Choir

Has Been Organized.

In the evening service at the Congregational church a new feature will be introduced Sunday. There will be two choirs at opposite ends of the church and the musical part of the service will consist of antiphonal singing between them, one choir being accompanied by the main organ and the other by the echo organ.

Church Has Three Choirs

By a new arrangement in the musical plans, the Congregational church now has three distinct choirs, under the leadership of Mrs. A. O. Wilson, and the children's choir, under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Jeffris, have taken a part in the church work for a long time. The adult choir has charge of the musical service both morning and evening while, as a rule, the children's choir gives one anthem during the morning service.

Organized By Mrs. Jeffris

Within the last month a third choir has been organized by Mrs. Jeffris, its membership including the boys and girls who have been members of the children's choir but who have outgrown the juvenile organization. The young people were so reluctant to give up their musical work and the church was so unwilling to lose their voices out of its service that Mrs. Jeffris finally decided to take the responsibility of organizing and training them as a separate choir.

they will be graduated into this recently organized senior choir. The new choir has been rehearsing for the past month, the work being entirely new to the boys who had never attempted to carry tenor and bass parts before. Mrs. Jeffris will continue to direct the children's choir as well as the new organization.

Choir to Make Debut

This choir will sing for the first time in public at the Sunday evening service. It includes twenty voices and it will be heard from the rear of the church. The young people will be seated in the rear gallery and sing with the echo organ and the adult chorus will occupy its place in the choir gallery, having the main organ for their accompaniment.

Order of Service
There will be a printed order to enable the congregation to follow the music and take a larger part in the service than usual. The service will include a brief sermon by the pastor, Rev. Denison.

FINGERBALL DEVOTEES HOLD FORTH IN MATCH GAMES.

BELMONT'S GAIN A VICTORY

Preliminary Match Held in Association Building—Janeville, Will Go to Beloit Wednesday.

Bowling matches were held on both the Association and Hockett's alleys on Friday evening. The former was a sort of preliminary try-out preceding the commencement of the Y. M. C. A. League games. The latter was the regular Friday match in the City League series. The Badgers and Belmonts were the competitors. The Belmonts won.

Before long the Association League series will begin. There will be five teams, consisting of three men each. The captains will probably be Van Horn, Richards, Denniston, Nolan and Cunningham. The five men who have the highest average for the last ten games of each month will make up the Y. M. C. A. League team for the next month. If matches are arranged with other leagues this team will represent the association.

With the exception of the leaders the players were new to match competition. Dr. Cunningham's three-man team won by a margin of 92 pins. Their leader won high score and high average.

Regular bowel will result in a complete cure when you use Mull's Grape Tonic. Mull's Grape Tonic will permanently cure the most obstinate case of constipation, and the numerous afflictions that invariably follow in its wake. No matter if it piles, liver complaint, kidney disorder, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, diarrhea or the self-poisoning which follows when the undigested food remains in the bowels where it patresies and empties highly diseased germs into the blood, such as typhoid and malaria, Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure. in That City is Badly Wanted.

Janesville is not the only Wisconsin town in which the League of Educators have been active and in which they have got into trouble with the government officials.

Kenosha, Wis., Dec. 11.—Special government detectives are in the city ferreting out a swindle which had been worked through the mails from Chicago. Postoffice officials here will not say what the case is, but it is believed to be "The League of Educators" scheme in which the concern offered 10 per cent a month to investors. Members of the league had been arrested in Chicago and had been fined. Not being satisfied with this they are still sending out their circulars calling for investments. The detectives followed a batch of their circulars to Kenosha, obtained them after they were delivered, and on this evidence will again take the League into court.

LAW DECISIONS

.. Fires by Railroad—Selection of Fuel

In an action against a railroad company for damages from damages caused by sparks emitted from an engine, it would be improper to instruct the jury that if the use of anthracite coal lessened the danger of throwing sparks from the smokestack, it would be negligence not to use such coal. The courts have no power of legislation. They cannot say that railroads shall use certain fuel in appliances.

Street Railways—Assault by Motorman

Where a passenger on a street car got into an altercation with the motorman, and after alighting from the car and depositing certain bundles which he carried on the sidewalk, returned to the car whereupon the motorman left the car and assaulted plaintiff in the street, plaintiff was not entitled to recover against the company for such assault; it not being committed by the motorman while he was acting within the scope of his employment on the car.

City Ordinances—Signs in Streets

A city ordinance prohibiting the erection of any stationary or swinging signs against the whole or any portion of the sidewalks is not necessarily invalid, as being special in its character and discriminating in its operation to a portion of the city only. Where the city is populous and the territory thus covered embraces the business center and the most crowded thoroughfares of the city, these conditions may furnish reasonable grounds for such discrimination, and render it consistent with the requirements of a valid ordinance.

LABOR LEADERS
RESENT CHARGES*DENY ATTEMPTS TO RUIN SHIPS

Federation President Says Formal Action Should Be Begun by the Ship-builders Against Anyone Guilty or Such Action as Alleged.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Discussion of the eight-hour bill in the labor committee of the senate was spirited. Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation of Labor, referring to a statement made by J. H. Mull, assistant manager at Cramps' shipyards, that the International Association of Machinists had attempted to cripple the transport Thomas during the Spanish-American war and also precipitated a strike in Cramps' ship-yard, said:

"If any man was guilty of the act charged here it was the duty of Mr. Cramp as a citizen of our country to make a criminal charge against him and to expose to the world what it implied. The charge has not been outlawed by the statute of limitation, and if the charge has no foundation in fact it simply reacts upon the heads of those who have made the accusation."

O'Connell Makes Denial.

James O'Connell, president of the International Association of Machinists, also vigorously denied that attempts had been made to destroy machinery on the battleship Alabama and the transport Thomas.

Former Secretary of the Navy Herbert, in an argument in opposition to the bill, declared there were few men in the house of representatives willing to take the responsibility of opposing any labor measure, no matter whether he approved of it or not, least he be set down as an enemy to the laboring class. "That explains why," he said, "this bill and preceding bills like it, even worse than it is, passed the house by large majorities."

Alleges Treason.

L. E. Payson, for the Newport News Shipbuilding company, referred to the strike at Newport News in 1901 and said that when the battleship Illinois was about to leave the yard on her trial trip word had gone forth from the labor union that she would not leave the yard until the union's terms were complied with. He vehemently exclaimed that it was an act which, if the United States had been at war, would have been misprision of treason. "Men have suffered the loss of their lives for less acts of culpability," said he, "than were committed against our people in June a year ago."

Defends Agitators.

James Duncan, national secretary of the Granite Cutters' association, denied former Secretary Herbert's assertion that members of the house would not oppose legislation in order not to appear as enemies to labor. He also denied the truth of Mr. Payson's statement regarding the battleship Illinois.

Mr. Gompers said he had been classed as an agitator by the "cyclonic and vehement Judge Payson," but it was the agitator who made this country and republic, that abolished slavery and that saved the children employed in the cotton mills in the Southern states.

HURRIES COLOMBIA.

Secretary Hay Urges Charge d'Affaires to Conclude Canal Treaty.

Washington, Dec. 13.—At the instance of Secretary Hay, Dr. Herran, Colombian chargé d'affaires, called at the State Department to discuss the canal treaty negotiations, that the secretary might be able to report the exact status of the canal situation to the cabinet. Dr. Herran was unable to give the secretary any reply from the Bogota government as to the price which Colombia will accept for the lease. It was explained to Dr. Herran that in view of the many other weighty diplomatic matters pressing for attention at this time, and the growing impatience at the capitol at the delay in the conclusion of a canal convention, immediate action by the Bogota government was imperative. Dr. Herran cabled the foreign office at Bogota the wishes of the State Department, and called attention to the serious complications that may arise out of the Venezuelan situation.
